THE GRAN HABANO LEGACY

It takes generations to make a great cigar, and on its fourth generation, Gran Habano continues its tradition close to its humble beginnings.

Tobacco farmer and cigar maker, Guillermo Rico, believes in patience building his business slowly and steadily through careful exposure of his cigars to the marketplace. His hallmark is attention to detail and a high reliance on strict quality control in traditional tabaquero fashion. Considering his background, such attention to detail is hardly a surprise.

The Rico family history in tobacco stretches back to 1920, when Guillermo Rico's grandfather began growing dark tobacco. His father succeeded him in 1946, and Guillermo recalls following him around the fields as a child and his mother rolling cigars at home. That legacy continues today in Gran Habano with a strong sense of family tradition embedded into every cigar made in Danlí, Honduras, where in 1998 the factory was established and became the birthplace of Gran Habano premium cigars and the quintessential Gran Habano look.

In 2003, our staple Gran Habano family of handmade cigars was introduced to resounding success by father and son team, Guillermo and George Rico. These long-filler cigars became the core of the company brand with three distinct blends: the Connecticut No. 1, a mild but rich cigar with a Connecticut shade wrapper; the Habano No. 3, a medium-bodied cigar in Habano wrapper; and our most beloved blend, the Corajo No. 5, a peppery full-bodied cigar in a Corajo wrapper. Consistency has always been insisted with these expert blends, which continue to be our best selling cigars.

The legacy of making cigars at Gran Habano continues to be a family affair. Established in Miami, Florida, Guillermo and George Rico strive for quality in every leaf and cigar in production. Honesty and passion are what compel us to make great cigars, married with a sense of originality being the signature of our company. We look to the future with optimism and a great sense of appreciation for those who have come to know us and our brand.

ONE ON ONE: GUILLERMO RICO

Guillermo Rico has come a long way since he opened his factory in 1998, but he has maintained his commitment to combining old traditions with fully vertical operations to create some of the most unique, and highly rated blends to the boutique cigar market.

Tell us a bit about yourself. How did you start smoking cigars? How did you get into the cigar business?

I was born and raised in Colombia and my first memories of cigars go back to my childhood there. Growing up, my parents grew tobacco and my mother had a small cigar factory. When I was a child, I had to help work the fields to cut tobacco leaves. As I got older I grew tobacco myself. When I eventually moved to the United States, the first business I started was manufacturing kitchen cabinets. Cigars came back into my life when someone approached me to make cigar boxes for them. From there, I started importing Cubita tobacco from Colombia for the factories in Miami during the cigar boom in the 1990's.

What do you love about your job?

What I love most about my work is the opportunity I get to be myself, to do what I love the most, and to be able to share it with people. I enjoy traveling, to be free, and to not depend on anyone.

What do you think you would be doing today if you were not making cigars?

If I wasn't in the cigar business today, I would definitely still have my own business. I would probably be in construction, more specifically manufacturing kitchen cabinetry.

When you are not working, when do you prefer to smoke? What is your favorite pairing?

When I am not working, I enjoy smoking cigars with friends. My preferred pairing is a Gran Habano Gran Reserva #3 2009 with Chivas Regal.

What is your favorite vitola?

My favorite vitola is a 54 x 6.

How would you describe your cigars?

I pay close attention during the manufacturing process. My cigars are made with great care in quality control with well processed tobaccos, and because we are fully vertically integrated, we can put high quality products out to the market with pricing that a wide range of consumers can afford.

If you could start all over again, what would you do differently? What is the best advice you can give?

If I had to do it all again, the first thing that comes to mind is dedicating more on farming because of my passion for growing tobacco. I would focus on having more tobacco fields to have a bigger library of tobacco to create an endless amount of blends. In retrospect, it's natural to be critical about how one approached their past business decisions, like applying different strategies for sales and marketing, but these are things that business owners fine tune as they learn along the way with more experience. The best advice that comes to mind for anyone coming into this business would be to know their brand's worth. Cultivating a cigar from seed to the packaged finished product requires an enormous amount of commitment. It can be extremely laborious and costly, but it is definitely a rewarding and fruitful vocation.
